Hong Kong

After joining the fencing club his freshman year, Thomas ultimately found his community as an intramural basketball team captain and as the financial secretary for the Chinese Student Association. "At first, I was really shy and my English wasn't very good. But now I have a lot of friends. When I go to the basketball court, people know me and want to play." When he graduates, Thomas wants to pursue his Master of Business Administration and become an investment banker.

ROAM FREELY

Our friendly, welcoming college town—where students make up about half the population—embraces your uniqueness. Just a few blocks from campus, downtown Davis comes alive with music, laughter, food and friends. Pedal to class, to the gym, to the movies—or take advantage of our student-run bus system that is free for students.
